OVERVIEW

Nicholas's practice centers on advice and litigation concerning financial services - in particular, collective investment schemes, client money and client assets regimes, e-money, payment services, pensions and, more recently, cryptoassets. His practice also includes advice and litigation on banking issues, insolvency issues and fraud claims, quite often arising out of the operations of financial services companies.

He is an experienced advocate in both trials and interim applications in the High Court, and has extensive experience of appellate advocacy, in the Court of Appeal, the Supreme Court and the Privy Council. He also has experience of advocacy before a wide range of disciplinary and regulatory tribunals, as well as in offshore jurisdictions.

Recent work has included:

- Advising as to the scope of regulated arranging activities and the Article 33B RAO exclusion in relation to an insurance intermediary
- Advising in relation to application of, and the holding company exclusion from, the AIFMD
- Advising as to whether a proposed fractionalised bond investment product would constitute a collective investment scheme
- Advising an FCA authorised payments firm in relation to an application to be authorised as an EMI
- Advising various EMIs as to the lawfulness of SD20 issued by the Payments Systems Regulator in relation to APP scams

EXPERTISE

BANKING & FINANCIAL SERVICES

Nicholas has been involved in financial services advice and litigation since before the creation of the FSA, at a time when regulation was undertaken by the SIB and the various SROs. He has particular experience in relation to collective investment schemes, covering investments as wide ranging as land banking schemes, airport car parking spaces, storage units, student accommodation, gambling, hotel rooms, peer-to-peer lending, and crowdfunding. He has advised in relation to the scope and application of the client money and client asset regimes in CASS, regulation of insurance and pensions, sale and rentback agreements, OEICs, insider dealing and market abuse and spot forex trading.

Nicholas also has extensive banking litigation experience in areas such as mis-selling (of interest rate hedging products, card protection insurance, derivatives and pensions), breaches of COB and COBS, and negligent discretionary portfolio management.
